

TRW Engineer to Speak On Air Traffic System

Dr. Robert K. Whitford, manager of Guidance and Control Operations at TRW Systems Group, will discuss new approaches in the use of satellites for controlling heavy air traffic, in a monthly colloquium tomorrow at 4 p.m. in Building S at Space Park.

In discussing how satellites can help the nation achieve totally controlled airspace and improve the handling of air traffic, Dr. Whitford will focus on a satellite system with integrated aircraft and ground instrumentation. He will examine the concept of precision, long range navigation, and high data rate digital communications with satellites.

One feature for such a system is simultaneous display of data to the pilot and data for pilot warning of pending collisions would maintain high safety as air traffic grows.

Dr. Whitford, who received his degrees at Purdue, is responsible for directing the development and hardware of avionics systems, spacecraft control systems, sensor systems, guidance and navigation systems, flight simulation and software systems, and TRW's electronic laboratories in Washington, D. C., and Houston, Texas. His operation employs more than 800 persons.

Dr. Whitford, who joined TRW as a member of the technical staff in 1955, after receiving his Ph.D. from Purdue, was appointed to his present position in 1965.

Special police enforcement units of the Torrance Police Department again will be assigned to monitor the Del Amo Center area during the holiday shopping period, Police Chief Walter R. Koenig has announced.

Chief Koenig said the special detail, in addition to enforcing all laws and keeping traffic moving around the center, will assist citizens when necessary.

"The Police Department also hopes to enlist the cooperation and understanding of all citizens who intend to shop at the Del Amo Center this season," the chief added.

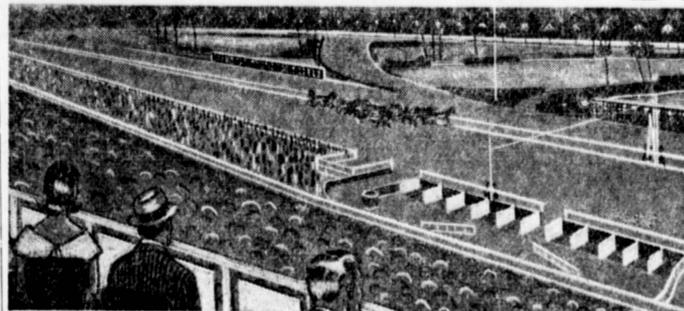

Most driveways bordering the Broadway-Sears and the Bullock's complexes will be posted to prohibit left turns, Chief Koenig explained. In addition, he listed the following tips for motorists and shoppers:

- Obey all traffic and pedestrian laws. All traffic laws will be strictly enforced and pedestrians will be cited for failing to cross at proper locations or for failing to obey pedestrian signals.
- Keep your car locked at all times when it is unattended. Gifts and other valuables should be locked in the trunk or otherwise placed out of sight.
- Remember where you park your car. Many police man-hours are consumed each year, the chief noted, taking reports of stolen cars for vehicle which have not been stolen — the driver merely forgot where he parked the vehicle.

"Traffic congestion is expected to be extremely severe," Chief Koenig commented, "and the only thing the police can hope to do is to keep constant motion." The chief also suggested motorists and shoppers take their time and avoid situations which lead to accidents.
